Antioch Junior Woman's Club Comedy Night raises funds

By JOSEPH MULLER

jimuller@nwnewsgrp.com

ANTIOCH - Antioch Junior Woman's Club (AJWC) Comedy Night participants learned amidst laughs and anecdotes that comedian Dobie "Mr. Lucky" Maxwell wasn't very lucky at all.

The annual fundraising event, which took place March 1 at St. Peter's Father Hanley Social Center, funds the AJWC, as well as the Open Arms Mission, Tim Osmund Sports Complex, and two local Antioch scholarships. AJWC president Laurie Stahl said they have a comedy night because there are no other fundraisers like it in the area.

"We are known for it," Stahl said.

A Hollywood theme was chosen for the AJWC's 11th annual comedy night. Participants entered the comedy night on a red carpet, surrounded by photos of celebrities. People could even have "paparazzi photos" taken of themselves.

"We wanted to have our own little Oscars night," Stahl said.

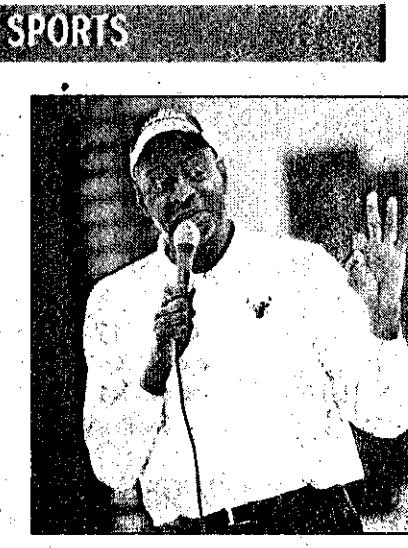

During most of the event, guests dined on food and enjoyed drinks from a martini bar, while donating money through a silent auction. A wide variety of donated items lined the auction tables, ranging from decorative items such as candles and wine racks; sports items such as Chicago Land Speedway and White Sox tickets; and even more adult items such as a martini set and a Victoria Secret gift bag.

"I liked the Sox tickets," Cindy Jetesar said.

Many Comedy Night participants said comedian Dobie Maxwell's performance was the night's climax.

Time changes and things to do in our area

Awhile back, I wrote asking for ideas of cool things to do in Lake County. I'm always searching for fun activities to do in my free time, as I'm sure most of you are.

In response, a Lake County reader who originally came from Cook County threw out these suggestions:

- Libertyville has some great offering, the smallest movie theatre you've ever seen, but a nice downtown area to walk and a public garden to hang around."

- "Check out Monkey Dish in Gurnee and Blackthorn Grille in Lake Villa."

- "If you like to boat, fish, snowmobile, or shop in malls, you'll do OK!"

Joe

That's an excellent start, but I'm sure there are more outing ideas out there.

Spring is almost here, and there will be a lot more activities to do in this area once the last bit of snow and ice finally goes away.

If anybody else has anymore ideas of cool things to do in Lake County, please let me know at jgrace@nwnewsgroup.com.

This week, we're featuring the second part of a five-part series on the Zacharias Sexual Abuse Center and the programs it offers in our County section.

Reporter Yadira Sanchez Olson has been doing an excellent job with the series so far, and I'm expecting great things out of the next three parts of the series, as well.

Yadira also became a full member of our staff this week, and she will be covering the Gurnee, Wadsworth, Zion, Beach Park and Waukegan areas. If you have some great story ideas for her, please contact Yadira at ysanchez@nwnewsgroup.com.

Finally, it's that wonderful time of year again when we must move our clock forward. So please remember to do that on Sunday.

Along with that, I'd like to officially welcome back late afternoon sunlight. It's been way too long, old friend.

You can write to Joe Grace at jgrace@nwnewsgroup.com.

Bill and Debbie Porter of Antioch look at a silent auction item during the Antioch Junior Woman's Club Comedy Night at St. Peter's Father Hanley Social Center in Antioch. The event featured comedian, Dobie Maxwell of Lake Villa.

Comedian has performed alongside Seinfeld, Leno

• FUNNY

"I liked his humor," Stahl said. "It hit a funny bone with everyone at my table."

Since becoming a comedian in 1985, Maxwell has performed all around the United States alongside the likes of Drew Carey, Dana Carvey, Jeff Foxworthy, Rosie O'Donnell, Jerry Seinfeld, and Jay Leno. Maxwell said he got the name "Mr. Lucky" for being so unlucky in real life.

He works much of this unluckiness into his act.

"Worst case scenario plus one equals my life," Maxwell said.

Maxwell said he takes any chance he can to perform charity events, donating a portion of CD sales to a veterans hospital.

"There are always people out there more unlucky than me," he said.

Although ticket sales were slightly lower than normal this year, Stahl predicted that the event will raise roughly the same amount of money as last year's comedy night - between $5,000 and $6,000. Overall, Stahl thought the night went very well.

"They really enjoyed it," Stahl said. "It's a great night for people to get out, have a good time, and forget about the horrible weather."

By STEVE PETERSON

ANTIOCH — Antioch High School's pom-dance team came home with a second and a seventh place at the state competition.

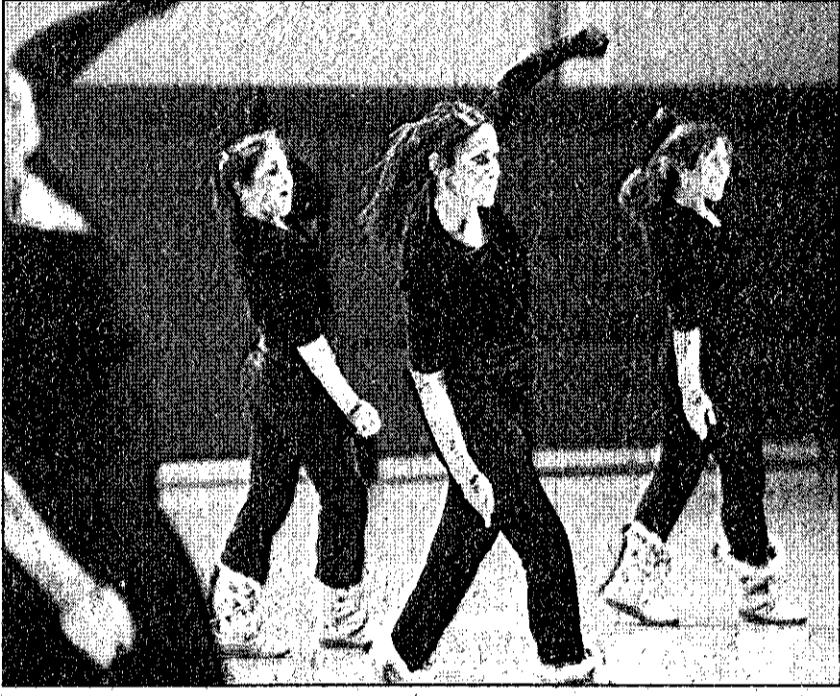

The kick routine came in second while the hip-hop routine took seventh place at the Peoria Civic Center.

"I was very proud of the girls," coach Kelly Taylor said. "They did a great job."

The Sequoits were led by seniors Megan Cole, Lyndsey Dvorak and Jamie Benoris.

"For the first time in a while, we had a young team," Taylor said.

The hip-hop squad qualified with a score of 86 percent, while the kick routine qualified after a finish at a Jacobs High School meet. Team Dance Illinois sponsors the state meet. Taylor said that there was a strong contingent of friends and family members from Antioch at the state meet. She is in her third year as head coach of the Sequoits.

Easter hunt approaching

Spring is almost here; we hope. And the Lindenhurst Park District is providing residents with their chance to enjoy some fun spring activities.

For kids who want to get an early start on their egg hunts, they can hop over to Forest View Park, 513 Forest View Drive, at 10 a.m. March 15. There will be age group hunting areas. One area will be for ages 2 and younger; the other area group for 3 to 8 year olds.

No registration is required, but if you want more details call 847-356-6011.

And don't worry, if we still have all that snow on the ground or other unpleasant weather conditions, the hunt will take place at 10 a.m. on March 22.

Have you got old gym shoes, but you think it's a waste to just throw them in the trash? Well I've got a good solution for you.

Antioch Junior Troop 2596 is collecting old gym shoes through April to be recycled.

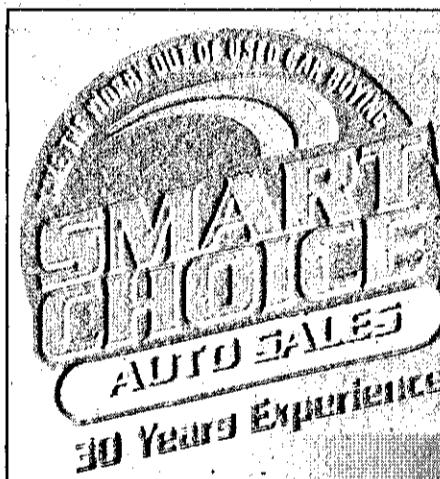

Shoes can be dropped off at Antioch Parks office. Shoes will be given to Waste Management and then delivered to NIKE.

The material will be recycled into making new gym floors and playground equipment.

Shoes need to be relatively clean and dry. Dress shoes, boots, flip flops, cleats, sandals or shoes will any metal such as zippers will not be accepted.

For someone who hates to waste stuff and loves recycling, like me, this sounds like a great program.

Students offer scholarly advice

Antioch High School program heads to New Orleans

By JESSICA JACOBSEN
jjacobsen@nwnewsgroup.com

ANTIOCH — Some students use a long weekend to catch up on school work, others use it to put in a little extra time at work. But for 21 Antioch High School students, they used their long weekend to go to New Orleans.

From March 2 to 4, many students participating in the school's Seminars for Scholars program visited New Orleans to see how educators are rebuilding and strengthening local schools years after Hurricane Katrina.

Principal Mike Nekritz designed the Seminars for Scholars program to expose students to the value conflicts inherent in complex contemporary issues.

Nekritz said one of the reasons the group went to New Orleans is because of Gary Solomon, president and CEO of Solomon Consulting Services. Solomon has been a speaker at Seminars for Scholars for the past two years and he helped arrange the students visiting New Orleans.

Before the trip, Nekritz said the students couldn't wait to go.

"They're excited to do it," he said. But other things also were running through the students' minds.

Senior Maggie Sabatino said she wanted to go down there and help students, but there is something else that she thinks also is important.

"Honestly, I just want to listen to their situations," Sabatino said.

Sabatino, 18, said she hopes she can learn from what these students have gone through.

Joy Nicholas, also a senior, went to New Orleans as well, and before she left for the trip said she was expecting to experience "some huge shock value."

But Nicholas, 17, also was expecting to experience "how blessed we are."

Because Seminars for Scholars deals with contemporary issues, the students and teachers will discuss topics such as what the government should have done during the Hurricane Katrina compared to what it did do, Nicholas said.

"The values that we learn are applicable everywhere," Nicholas said.

While in New Orleans, the students assisted in rebuilding a local school, advised teens on creating their own Seminars for Scholars program, and viewed the devastation in New Orleans, according to a release.

In addition to those tasks, Nekritz had three others goals for the students.

One was have a really good time. The second was to see a broader world.

And the third was for the students to see that at 17 or 18 years old, they still have the ability and power to affect change.

"Those are three pretty diverse goals," he said.

ANTIOCH — Festival Arts of Antioch is looking to spread a love for music with an upcoming chorus concert.

"I'm always eager," Ken said about his upcoming performance.

Ken's wife, Betty, and secretary of Festival Arts of Antioch, also is looking forward to the concert.

Betty said the group has been doing concerts like this off and on for years and because of donations they are able to present the concert free to the public.

"The Crucifixion" is choral meditation about the last few days of Jesus Christ's life leading to his death on the cross. Ken said the chorus is not trying to push a specific message with the concert. It will display sacrifice and hope, but that is not the group's objective.

"The only message we have is the message of the music," Ken said.

Open Arms Mission seeking donations for Easter project

LAKE COUNTY JOURNALS

ANTIOCH — Open Arms Mission, Antioch, plans to distribute 3,000 Easter baskets to children, senior citizens, hospital patients and other food pantries in Lake County.

"It is wonderful how a little basket can brighten someone's day this time of year," said Executive Director the Rev. Scott Keenan. "We know the holiday isn't about baskets, eggs and candy but we don't want anyone excluded from this celebration."

Baskets are filled with candy, healthy treats and small gifts will be distributed to children and seniors within the Lake Villa, Antioch and Lindenhurst area who use the food pantry. Baskets also will go to Big Brothers-Big Sisters, Nicasa Women's Shelter, The Garden Quarter Center, Staben House, Victory Lakes Nursing Home, Winchester House, Condell Hospital children's unit, Avon Township food pantry, and A Safe Place.

The mission partners with other organizations to prepare and distribute the baskets, including Lakes Community High School, Lindenhurst Early Childhood Center, Northern Illinois Scholarship Pageant, and various other community groups and organizations.

"Our purpose is to provide Easter baskets to recipients who otherwise would receive nothing for Easter," said project organizer Lisa Ronzio. "The seniors especially are so thrilled every year to get these baskets."

Open Arms Mission is seeking donations of empty Easter baskets and financial donations to buy items to fill the baskets.

Donations can be made to Open Arms Mission, P.O. Box 79, Antioch, IL 60002. For more information, contact the mission at 847-395-0309.

A goal to help others

"Well I'm not going to extract venom from a cobra. What I can do, I'll do," said Kathy Kramer before she set off on an altruistic adventure into the mountains of Guatemala. Kathy of the caring and compassionate heart had learned of a benevolent group called L.A.M.P. (Latin American Medical Providers) L.A.M.P. is made up of doctors, nurses and several interpreters from the United States who visit Guatemala yearly to assist those in need of medical help.

Kathy, whose main goal in life is to help others, found this to be an enormous opportunity to serve. So she signed on this year's expedition as an interpreter. Kathy speaks fluent Spanish. The L.A.M.P. clinic is in the town of Jalapa. This year's L.A.M.P. medical team was made up of 84 doctors, nurses, a dentist, a surgeon and several interpreters.

They stayed in a deserted convent near the clinic. There were two bathrooms in the building. One had a toilet, minus a seat and no running water. The other had a shower with running water. However, it was all cold, no hot water was forth coming. The group nicknamed the shower "The hokey pokey" for the popular dance. You know "You put your right arm in, you take your right arm out." Their days were long and filled with helping people. They saw 2,416 people in four days. Kathy was greatly impressed by these selfless volunteers, who gave so freely of themselves, even to pay all their expenses.

Kathy who is on the board of directors for "The Friends of the Orphans" orphanages, visited an orphanage in Guatemala.

She had many encounters with the natives and several cases really touched her heart. Two outstanding episodes that touched her deeply will stay with her forever. First there was the gentle little woman who had an extremely advanced case of cancer. It was so bad there was nothing the doctors could do for her but give her medicine to ease the pain. As Kathy questioned the little woman, who was surrounded by her husband and children, Kathy felt the woman's immense courage radiating from her.

"I'll never forget her serenity as I explained her dire situation to her" Kathy said. So she is back from serving. She did what she could do and not a drop of venom was extracted. "What a trip." Kathy exclaimed.

A shoulder to lean on

Center offers support to victims when they need it most

By YADIRA SANCHEZ OLSON
 ysanchez@nwnewsgroup.com

GURNEE - Imagine what a horrible experience it would be to be the victim of a sexual attack. Imagine the physical pain and the eruption of feelings - fear, anger, confusion, and shame.

Now, add to that the fact that after that terrifying ordeal, the police and the doctors are in a race to beat the clock in order to get what they need to do their job.

This is where the advocates from the Zacharias Sexual Abuse Center come into place.

The center's staff is professionally trained to make the experiences of the result of sexual abuse less frightening for the victim. They aid the professionals such as the police officers and the medical staff by reminding them of the sensitive emotional state that the victim is in.

"They are an integral part of the process," said Jay Patrick, commander at the Gurnee Police Station. "It is very important to the victims [to have them there], and that helps us by making the victims more at ease."

Patrick says he knows that the questions police officers need to ask to get the information they need can make the victims feel intimidated, but that having a professional advocate helps.

"We tell them exactly what is going to happen and we attend to their needs," said Wendy Ivy, director of Advocacy and Volunteer Services at the Zacharias Sexual Abuse Center.

Ivy said the advocate's primary role is to protect the victim's rights and give emotional support to the victim and the family.

"It's to our benefit to work well with the community," Ivy said. "We're really a team."

Ivy said that the more sensitive and complete the procedure is, the easier the healing will be.

"No matter how long they need us to be there with them we stay," Ivy said.

The center has networking agreements with the 42 police stations in Lake County and all of the hospitals. An advocate from the Zacharias Center is always available to be called on.

The center also works with schools and the state's attorneys by providing education and training. The center also teaches children and adults preventive measures to sexual abuse.

"We work with preschoolers, elementary schools, middle schools and colleges," said Jane

Hunter said that the programs they teach have age-appropriate information such as the prevention of date rape for college students and how to deal with bullies for preschoolers.

County deals with winter aftermath

Lake County's disaster status sparks changes

By JESSICA JACOBSEN
 jjacobsen@nwnewsgroup.com

Lake County has seen its fair share of snow this winter. So much snow that the county was declared a disaster area by Gov. Rod Blagojevich.

Kevin Kerrigan with the Lake County Division of Transportation said he has an unofficial estimate of 73 inches of snow Lake County has seen this winter, as of March 3.

Because Lake County has been considered a disaster area, steps are being taken to determine whether municipalities can receive compensation for the extra work they have done because of heavy snowfalls.

"We're sort of in a wait and see," said Kent Mackenzie, emergency management coordinator of Lake County.

Mackenzie said the county is waiting to see whether the federal government agrees with the state along with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

If authorized, each unit of government can apply to FEMA for reimbursement of some of the costs, Mackenzie said. Reimbursement of those extra costs could be as much as 80 percent, Mackenzie said, but typically is about 75 percent.

State officials also are looking to do their part. State Sen. Michael Bond, D-Grayslake, announced that he will meet with Milton Sees, Illinois Department of Transportation secretary, to discuss this year's snowfall removal in Lake County. Bond said a date has not been set, but will likely be within the next two weeks.

Bond said he met twice in 2007 with IDOT representatives and other area lawmakers for secure additional funding for snow removal services in northern Lake County. The yards served are by Grayslake and Gurnee IDOT.

"While we've made significant progress in improving the performance of our IDOT yards as a result of the action taken in 2007, the snowfalls of Feb. 5 remind us that we must continue to be vigilant in planning and preparing for extreme events," Bond said in a release.

The upcoming meeting will allow Bond and Sees to discuss what worked this winter and what didn't work. They also will discuss "what is within our power and control with snow removal," Bond said.

Many other topics will be up for discussion such as equipment, maintenance, upgrades, route changes, driver training, and much more.

The 2007 changes added six new routes with additional staff at Grayslake and Gurnee yards, a purchase of seven new trucks, a decrease in the average route length to 28 miles, and improved communication and intergovernmental cooperation, according to a release.

Bond said he still thinks the routes need to increase. He also said he would like to see a standard implemented when it comes to parts because not all parts on vehicles are interchangeable.

"Parts not being interchangeable can be a problem," he said.

Bond said for example that if something breaks during a snowstorm it will add more lag time and frustration if parts in stock aren't compatible with the trucks.

Tax increment financing districts were originally meant to stimulate development in blighted communities. But as time goes on, it seems as though tax districts are being used to give assistance to well-heeled private developers, columnist John Matijevich writes. It might be time to revisit the tax district rules.

Bridal shop sponsors prom model contest

By JESSICA JACOBSEN
jacobsen@nwnewsgroup.com

GURNEE - Prom might not be a couple of months away, but that doesn't mean many teenage girls aren't thinking about it.

Tami Wloch, owner of Cloud 9 Bridal in Gurnee, knows that and she came up with an idea to make prom even more exciting for high school girls.

Cloud 9 is sponsoring a Top PROM Model competition for all Lake County girls who are juniors and seniors in high school. The final competition will be at the Lake Villa/Lindenhurst Chamber of Commerce Springfest, which is March 29. The competition begins at 1 p.m., and the winner will be announced at 3 p.m.

Wloch said she got the idea from the bridal fashion show that her store hosts.

"We always have younger girls who are interested in modeling and want to be part of the show," Wloch said. "But usually they're too young to model as a bride, so I don't really have anywhere where they can showcase their modeling talents."

But in this fashion show the winner will go home with plenty of prizes. The winner will receive a free prom dress from Cloud 9, a free tuxedo rental from Savvi Formalwear, a free photo shoot, a $50 savings bond and three hours tuition credit to College of Lake County.

Wloch said she encourages girls of all shapes and sizes to apply.

"I know sometimes girls who aren't the size 0 hesitate to get involved things like this," she said. "But we really want girls to bring that outgoing personality."

Applications for the competition are due March 10, and after that the top 10 finalists will be chosen.

Wloch said applicants will wear gowns from Cloud 9.

"They don't even have to have something fabulous to wear on stage," she said. "We're going to provide that for them."

The top 10 finalist also will receive a number of prizes including a free hair updo from Ooh La La Salon, a free head shot portrait from CLIX Portraits, makeup from Mary Kay, and much more.

Another bonus is the finalist can register their prom dress with Cloud 9 and the shop will make sure not to sell the dress to someone who attends the same school as the finalists.

Even all applicants will receive a prize. They will each receive a 10 percent off coupon for any instock prom dress at Cloud 9.

Wloch, a Lake Villa resident, said she thought having the event at Springfest was a good idea because she noticed when she attended the event that there weren't many teenagers there.

That might change this year because it will be the audience members who choose the winner of the competition, Wloch said.

Shaw partners with Yahoo

By KURT BEGALKA
kbegalka@nwnewsgroup.com

GENEVA - Shaw Newspapers, parent company of the Lake County Journals, has partnered with Internet giant Yahoo Inc. to expand its online presence.

The agreement will allow online readers and advertisers of the Lake County Journals and Shaw's other newspapers to tap into Yahoo's vast Internet services, including its recruitment portal, HotJobs.

"By signing with Yahoo, we will expand the reach of our Web sites, and we also allow our advertisers to tap into new markets," said John Rung, chief operating officer of Shaw Suburban Media.

HotJobs, for example, will allow help-wanted advertisers to get into the Yahoo network to attract new candidates, Rung said.

"You can search locally, regionally and nationally, and you can search in more specific ways," he said. "It will be much more convenient for job-seekers, and more effective for employers looking for candidates."

The partnership also provides seamless Internet searches for readers, access to Yahoo News and Yahoo Mail, and online links between Yahoo and Shaw Newspapers on all Web sites.

The cross-selling of advertising means Shaw's local sales force will sell inventory on Yahoo to local advertisers, and Yahoo's national sales force will sell national advertising on those sites.

"We will be able to offer our customers solutions with more products and with more traffic," said Chris Rutherford, vice president of interactive sales for Shaw Suburban Media. "This is an extremely important strategic partnership for us. Yahoo and Yahoo HotJobs are tremendously recognizable brands, so we're very excited."

Shaw Newspapers and its 25 daily and weekly publications were joined by three other publishers in partnering with Yahoo, the company announced Feb. 29.

Yahoo's Newspaper Consortium now includes 634 participating newspapers, 425 of them dailies. According to Editor & Publisher magazine, this represents 30 percent of all U.S. daily newspapers and 37 percent of all U.S. Sunday circulation.

To date, Yahoo HotJobs has launched co-branded career sites serving more than 425 U.S. newspapers. By integrating with the newspaper partners and delivering better reach, relevance and performance, Yahoo HotJobs has experienced a 50 percent annual jump in Web traffic.

"We've already seen tremendous growth and have captured valuable local audience share across every major U.S. region through integration with Yahoo HotJobs and the newspaper partners," Lem Lloyd, vice president for Yahoo's Newspaper Consortium, said in a released statement.

Basketball rims and horsepower

It's time to go car shopping again. Blech.

I'm not a big fan of motor vehicles. I do love that they take me places much faster than walking or horse-drawn wagon, but I hate paying for gas, how they always break down at the worst time, contributing to the destruction of the environment, and, of course, the change-eating space under the seats.

They are a necessary evil, though. And it's time for me to buy a new one, seeing as how my last car went into early retirement.

That means this Saturday I have to go to various dealerships looking for the next expensive piece of equipment that will carry me around for the next five years or so (I hope).

I just don't like shopping for cars. It's not that I necessarily have bad experiences at dealerships.

Generally, the sales people are all incredibly pleasant and helpful and coffee-giving. It's just that I don't know what they're talking about most of the time.

"Are you looking for a four-cylinder or six-cylinder engine?"

"How much horsepower are you looking for?"

"What kind of rims do you like?"

I have no idea how to respond to any of these questions. But I can't tell them that because I don't want them to know that I know as little about cars as I do.

So I make up stuff such as:

"How about something in the middle. A five-cylinder engine? Or do those not exist?"

"I like horses. They are pretty powerful."

"Basketball."

Sometimes they laugh, but it's more of a pity laugh than a funny laugh.

It's time to go car shopping again. Blech.

Dealing with Cole Hall

Gov. Rod Blagojevich is seeking $40 million to tear down and replace Cole Hall at Northern Illinois University, the location of a shooting that left five students dead and 16 injured.

"What I've heard from parents and students is that the site should be consecrated," NIU President John Peters said.

Peters said a privately funded memorial of some kind would instead occupy the land where the hall now stands, near the center of the 23,000-student campus.

We cannot express our sympathies enough for the victims of this tragedy. What occurred at NIU was horrifying. However, we think that this issue – what to do with Cole Hall – should be approached pragmatically, not emotionally.

It certainly would be understandable for the university to gut and renovate Cole Hall. And we think that some memorial for the victims of the shootings at that location is needed. But we do not think that the entire building needs to be torn down, that tens of millions must be spent on a new building, and that the ground must be declared "consecrated."

Other schools and universities have had to deal with similar circumstances.

Norris Hall at Virginia Tech reopened. The building was the site of 30 of 32 murders during the shootings that occurred in 2007. The building still houses engineering offices and laboratories on the first floor. The second floor classrooms, where most of the shootings occurred, is being renovated into the Center for Peace Studies and Violence Prevention.

The Columbine High School massacre occurred throughout the high school. Ultimately, school officials decided to tear down the library and construct a new library elsewhere at the high school. The library was the location where most of the students were killed.

It might be unrealistic to suggest that students resume taking classes in the Cole Hall auditorium, at least without major renovations.

But we think that the existing building still can be a useful structure that also memorializes the victims of the shooting.

April 15 not so taxing

To the Editor:

The State of Illinois again is offering taxpayers a unique and effective way to support charities as part of the state's 2007 Income Tax Check Off Program. Eleven charitable funds are included in this year's campaign, including the Multiple Sclerosis Direct Assistance Fund.

We are calling on the generosity of Illinois residents, asking them to join the movement against MS by designating a contribution to the Direct Assistance Fund when they file their state taxes. It costs an estimated $50,000 each year to pay for the costly medications, medical equipment, therapy and other expenses associated with treating MS. As we work toward a cure for MS in the future, the MS Society is committed to meeting the demand for services that offer hope to people living with the disease right now. When you file your taxes, make your mark against MS at Section 10, Line F and help create a world free of MS.

Lynda M. Chott, President
National Multiple Sclerosis Society – Greater Illinois Chapter

The people have spoken

To the Editor:

I want to thank Sen. Michael Bond and co-sponsor Rep. Ed Sullivan for their effort to reform Property Assessments.

Together, they've introduced a bill to help taxpayers understand their assessment.

Simply put: The people have spoken.

Since we began this battle in 2002, it has been the goal of taxpayers to have this issue land on the desks of state legislators for the needed fundamental reform. While this bill is a great start, fundamental change is still a ways down the road.

More good news is in store, however.

The Senate has empaneled the "Property Tax Relief and Reform" task force whose duty is to look at the entire system from top to bottom. I am preparing an executive summary for that panel.

Together with the dramatic changes made at the Lake County Assessor level, which is part of the solution, there is a glint of light in the tunnel.

We now have state government working with county government and working for the people.

There is more to do and it will take time.

That is illustrated by the fact I've been on this case for six years and we're just now seeing real progress.

That means more and more accountability.

It's what taxpayers deserve. We're not done fighting.

Great job sanitary district

To the Editor:

On Friday evening, Feb. 15, I noticed that there was a problem with the drains in our home. The sewer was backing up into the lower level of our home. Fortunately, it did little-to-no damage to our home. But had it gone unnoticed, it could have been an inconvenient and expensive problem.

Being a retired pipefitter, I opened the clean-out from our house and saw that the sewage was backing up into the clean-out pipe indicating that the main sewer line in the street was blocked. Being as we are at the bottom of a dead end street as well as the lowest house on the street, this made us the first to be affected by the clog.

I noticed this problem at about 8 p.m. and called the Lakes Region emergency number and spoke to Chris on the phone. Chris came out about 30 minutes later and determined where the clog was located, at which time he called Kevin. Kevin showed up about 45 minutes later. In 10 degree temperatures and darkness, as it was 10 p.m. by then, Kevin and Chris tried to rod the line in the street but were unable to break it free. They then went back to the shop and picked up a trash pump and hoses so they could pump out the manhole to give us temporary relief overnight until they could get back on Saturday with the "big" hydro rodder to finish the job. They were here in the darkness and freezing temperatures until about midnight. Both men were very prompt, helpful, knowledgeable, professional and friendly. Thank you to Kevin, Chris and the Lakes Region Sanitary District for a great job and quick service.

Tax increment financing law needs change

John S. Matijevich

From time to time, in this column, I have written about the need to change state laws that govern tax increment financing districts, sometimes called TIFs. When the law was enacted, its purpose was to stimulate development in blighted areas. No law has been passed that has so abused the original intent of the legislation.

I'm writing again because there have been recent discussions that highlight the need for tax district reforms. The arguments for change emphasize that the public must have transparency on how governments are using funds generated in tax districts.

Last November, the Civic Federation of Chicago, a taxpayer watch group, released its study of tax districts. Its report indicated that public subsidies in Chicago tax districts have generated more than a billion dollars in private investments, so development has been energized. It concludes, though, that there are many unanswered questions.

Another indication that tax districts laws are on the radar screen was the introduction of a bill in the Illinois House by Rep. John Fritchey, D-Chicago. It would require more information of how property taxes are affected by tax districts.

He said at this time when homeowners are reeling from skyrocketing property taxes and money is tight for families, people should absolutely know how and where the millions collected by tax districts are being spent.

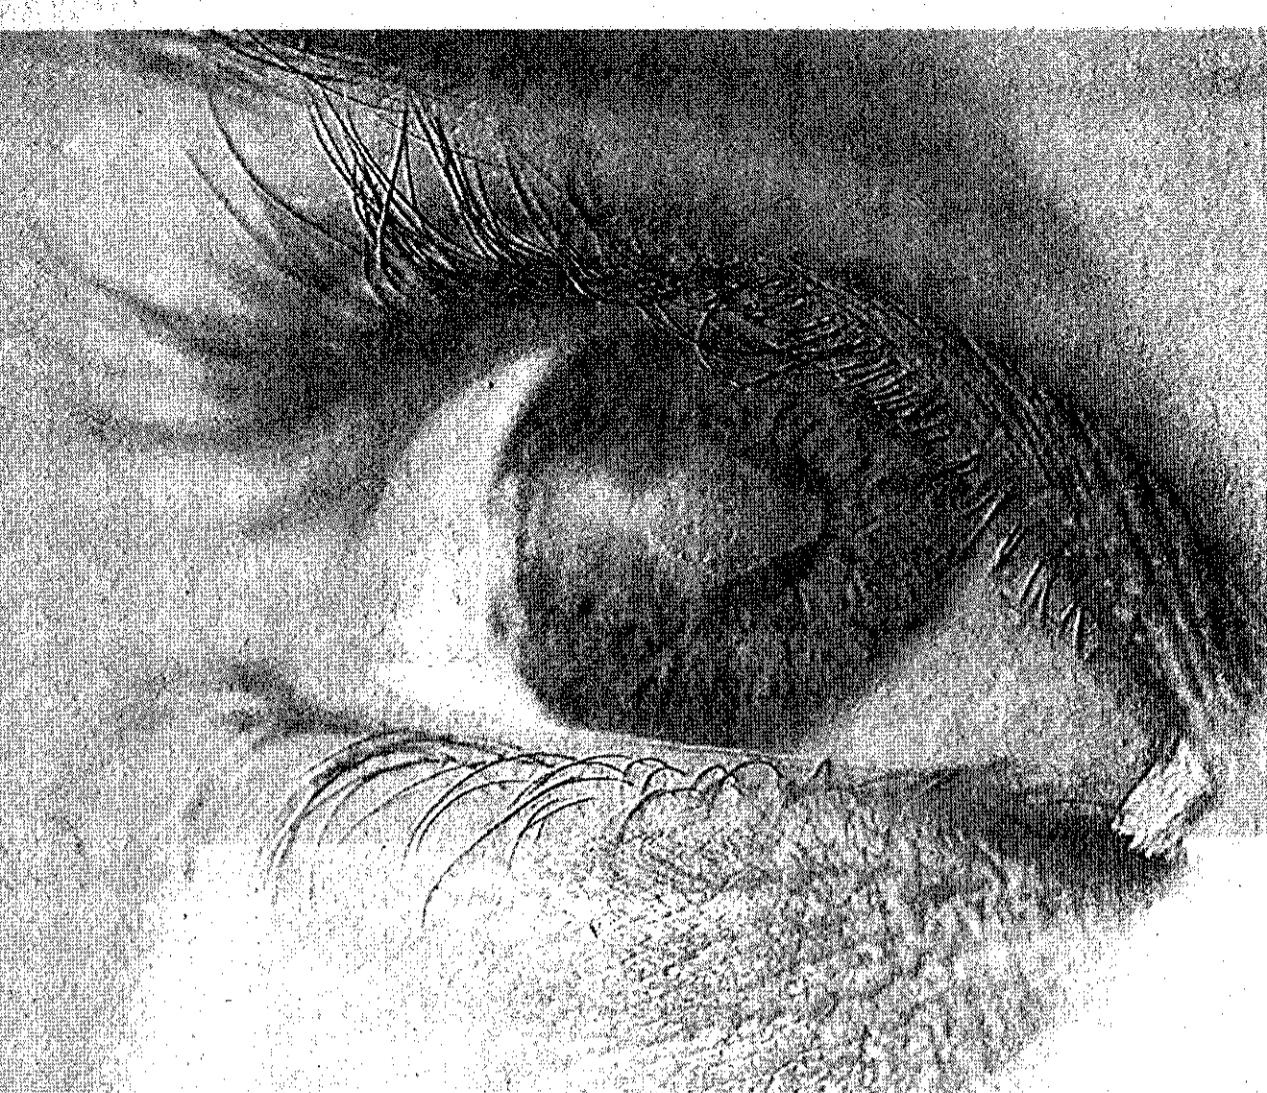

Unfortunately, the chance that any such reform of tax districts will become law is slim to none. Tax districts have become "public welfare for private developers."

They in turn become large-scale political contributors ... all at the expense of ordinary taxpayers and taxing bodies other than municipalities. But cities want to keep that cash cow alive and well.

• John Matijevich writes a weekly column for the Lake County Journals.

'Encouraging' kids to learn

My older son loves his video games. I mean really loves them. In a not-eating-for-hours, eyes-bugging-out-of-his-head sort of way.

His brothers eventually will go outside and play, but not Antonio. He will sit alone for hours, clacking away on the buttons of his controller.

Not exactly the hobby I hoped he would have.

As my kids' individual personalities have developed, I've noticed they aren't always interested in the things I thought they would be. Or the things in which I would like them to be interested.

As a kid, I would have been happy to spend all summer in my closet reading books. (I had a big closet.) So each summer, my mom would open our park district brochure and "encourage" (force) me to choose an activity. I chose something different each year, including gymnastics and tennis. For most of these activities, I showed absolutely no aptitude. But some of the skills I mastered have lasted into adulthood.

For example, I can still twirl a baton and walk on stilts. OK, not at the same time. But still, it impresses the heck out of the kids.

Turns out my sons are a lot like me – not big on participation. So each year, I must "encourage" them to choose at least one activity.

This year, Antonio and his brother seem to have settled on soccer. Let's hope all the running doesn't result in excessive perspiration.

Recently, though, my son brought a cookbook home from the library and proceeded to renew it for three weeks. In retrospect, I shouldn't have been as surprised as I was. He has great attention to detail, which is ideal for following a recipe and measuring, and has always liked to help me in the kitchen.

I realized this might be the start of a great, new, non-video-game-related pastime. It also made me wonder how many other things my kids like that I have not yet considered hobby-worthy.

Antonio still loves video games, and I have had to restrict this "hobby" to the weekends so he actually will do other things. But I read recently that brain surgeons who played video games have superior manual dexterity. So maybe I'll let him play more of those video games he loves so much. I mean, what parent wouldn't want his or her son to be a doctor?

Kids and vegetables

By JEAN KRESSY
editorial@relishmag.com

Long before Jessica Seinfeld (Jerry Seinfeld's wife), author of "Deceptively Delicious," began slipping spinach into brownies and cauliflower into mashed potatoes to get her kids to eat more vegetables, we were doing the same thing, but not as secretly. Kids usually know when someone is trying to fool them, so our approach to introducing children to vegetables has always been to let them see what they're eating. Also, we're careful about the add-ins. Beets and broccoli might work in the Seinfeld kitchen, but we like to start with less assertive flavors, like green beans.

Spanish rice, which is Spanish in name only and probably comes from a Mexican dish with onion and tomatoes, is a great recipe for culinary doctoring.

For serving along with kid food like hamburgers or hot dogs, we go for Spanish rice with green beans and tomatoes.

There's nothing mysterious about it; the rice is lightly browned and cooked with green beans, which are diced but recognizable, and tomatoes, cut in small chunks.

We suggest that the first time you make it, you use a small amount of green beans; once you're sure your children like it, add more the next time.

If they're turned off after a few bites, put the recipe in the "hold" file and try again another time.

Child experts say to pick your battles, but food should not be one of them. Most children will eventually eat all kinds of vegetables, and some will surprise you and turn into vegetarians.

Spanish rice

(Serves 4)

Ingredients

2 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 yellow onion, finely chopped
1 garlic clove, minced
1 small tomato, finely diced
1/4 cup diced green beans
1 cup long-grain white rice
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups lower-sodium chicken broth

Directions

Heat olive oil in a large skillet over medium heat. Add onion and garlic; cook, stirring occasionally for 3 minutes.

Stir in tomatoes and beans; cook 3 minutes. Add rice, oregano and salt; stir well and cook 1 minute, until rice is lightly browned. Add broth, bring to a boil. Reduce heat to low. Cover and cook 15 to 25 minutes, until liquid is absorbed. Remove from heat; let stand 5 minutes. Fluff with a fork before serving.

Za Za's: Fine Italian dining a family tradition

By LESLIE GLAZIER-WERNER

The Fox Lake area has a first-rate Italian restaurant on Washington Street (between Rollins Road and Route 59) that would be just as at home in downtown Chicago. In fact, when owners Bob and Karen moved from the city to the area, they opened Za Za's because they didn't want to travel far for good Italian food.

Bob and Karen have been in the restaurant business for over 25 years, with five of those years spent running Za Za's. Karen said Za Za's is a family owned and run restaurant "where every guest is also treated like family."

day—light with just the right blend of flavorful ingredients. This was capped off with another one of Chef Davito's specialties, a wonderful crème brûlée cheesecake.

In addition to the extensive dinner menu, Za Za's has a varied selection of dinner specials every night. They include South African lobster tail, orange roughy stuffed with Maryland crab cake, a 12-ounce veal chop with brandy mushroom sauce, and a marinated rack of lamb. The list goes on.

Za Za's is a definite asset to the community. In turn, Karen said, "We highly appreciate the village and its patronage. And this reviewer is sure you'll appreciate the fine Italian dining offered at Za Za's."

Six Flags Great America's Hurricane Harbor receives prestigious safety award

Six Flags, Great America announced today that Hurricane Harbor has received the Platinum International Aquatic Safety Award from Ellis & Associates. The platinum award is the highest and most prestigious award that Ellis & Associates presents on an annual basis and is only presented to water parks that score in the top nine percent in their worldwide audits.

An extensive audit process conducted by Ellis & Associates is used as the criteria for the safety awards. The audit program consists of random unannounced audits which provide a snapshot of the lifeguard's ability to meet swimmer protection standards and test ready lifeguard skills as well as a facilities ability to demonstrate and meet patients care standards. A facility must consistently perform in the top seven to nine percent to qualify for the Platinum Award.

"Safety is our number one priority and we're proud that an organization as knowledgeable and respected as Ellis &

In addition, each lifeguard attends a scheduled hour of continuing education each week. Throughout the season the aquatics training team conducts numerous daily safety audits and performance evaluations during regular park operation for all team members. This rigorous commitment to training insures that safety is our number one priority at all times.

The massive Hurricane Harbor water park at Six Flags Great America provides

National City becomes Chicago's fourth largest bank

Conversion of MidAmerica Bank expands presence in Chicago, marks entry into Wisconsin

A month before St. Patrick's Day, Chicago and Milwaukee are already turning green - National City green, that is. Feb. 11 marked the conversion of 80 former MidAmerica Bank branches and more than 115 ATMs to the National City Corporation brand in Chicagoland and Greater Milwaukee.

Now that the conversion is complete, National City operates 120 branches and 163 ATMs throughout Chicagoland and holds deposits of more than $10 billion, making it the fourth largest bank. In Greater Milwaukee, National City has 24 branches, 28 ATMs and $1.4 billion in deposits, making it the fifth largest bank in the market and providing a strong platform for future growth.

And it's more than a cosmetic change. With the purchase of MidAmerica Bank, National City is able to offer the people of Chicagoland and Greater Milwaukee access to a sophisticated array of financial products and services in addition to the familiar, friendly service that MidAmerica customers have come to expect. Chicagoland and Milwaukee customers now have access to National City's new enhanced checking products that provide free access to foreign ATMs, rebates for other banks' ATM fees and free checks for certain accounts. Additionally, National City upgraded MidAmerica's ATMs giving customers increased capabilities such as options for the visually impaired and the ability to personalize settings. Customers also now have access to points from National City, an industry-leading program that rewards individuals and business customers for everyday banking transactions such as using their CheckCard or credit card, paying bills online, and even writing checks.

In addition, National City has more than doubled its Chicagoland branch network in the past several years and is adding six new locations in 2008. A new branch recently opened in Willowbrook and another is scheduled to open in Wauconda within the next month.

This powerful combination strengthens and broadens products and services for existing MidAmerica customers and expands

National City's branch and ATM network," said Joseph A. Gregoire, president of National City - Illinois Banking. "While the size and scope of our operation has changed, our personal attention to detail and superior customer service expect remains unchanged. Through a strong commitment to the community, increased convenience for customers and enhanced products and services, National City reaffirms its commitment to Chicagoland and its promise of delivering superior products and services."

In Greater Milwaukee, the company has named Beth R. Wnuk president of the market to oversee its Wisconsin operations and the overall performance of corporate banking, retail, small business and the Private Client Group wealth management services. Wnuk has more than 16 years of experience in the financial services industry having held various senior management positions in retail banking, strategic planning, and corporate operations and information services at National City, U.S. Bancorp and Comerica Bank.

With a history of dedication to the communities in which it operates, National City works with local leaders, non-profit organizations, business and government officials to make a lasting difference. Through tax credit, venture capital, and direct equity investments, the National City Community Development Corporation works to develop important projects that help create strong communities.

As a partner in revitalizing neighborhoods, National City has committed $5.8 million in equity to create 95 units of new market rate and affordable rental housing on the former Pabst Blue Ribbon brewery site in Milwaukee, the first such investment since entering the market. The Blue Ribbon Lofts will be a catalyst for the further redevelopment of this important and historic area. In Chicago, National City has partnered in neighborhood revitalization investing nearly $72 million in developments to preserve nearly 1,200 units of affordable housing and 153,000 square feet of commercial space.
